

Alligate

Land O' Lakes High School, Land O' Lakes, Fla.

"EVERYONE, I'M HERE, GET OUT OF MY WAY!"

You've probably seen him here.

You've probably seen him in the hallways during passing period. He is the junior seen with the backpack that weighs as much as your average freshman. His name is Stephen Sheehan and he began his first year at LOLHS last year after living in Spring Hill. To maneuver through the halls of LOLHS with such a large load seems like a difficult challenge. What is Stephen's solution? Basically, he screams to the students congesting the hallway "Everyone, I'm here, get out of my way!" When he's not bellowing in the halls or attending an American Sign Language meeting, you can find him at home with his horses. Stephen has been riding Western for about two years now and owns a Mustang, an Appaloosas, and a Paint. Stephen says he enjoys riding because "I like the thrill of the wind through your hair."

SCHEDULE MAPS

OUR FINAL DESTINATIONS

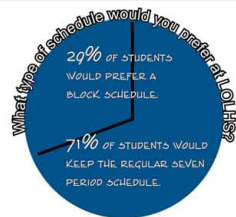

Wendy Gu is in her sophomore year as an IB student. She decided to go into the IB program because she felt it would better prepare her for college. Besides studying for her complex schedule, Wendy likes to spend her free time playing tennis for the high school.

Robert LaChance is a senior who works as a busboy at Texas Road House. His least favorite hallway is the Science hallway because it is so crowded. Bobby's favorite period is lunch because he gets to see his friends that he doesn't have any classes with this year.

You'll probably see Laura Burke, a junior, wandering the halls with a Red Bull in hand as she walks to her first period Chemistry Honors class. Laura has great interest photography and has been taking the hobby seriously for about seven years now.

Carlos Disla III is a Freshman at LOLHS. This is his first year on the high school swim team, but he was on the Lightning Swim Team for three years as well.

There are about 1,536 students here at Land O' Lakes High School, each with their own unique schedule; rarely are any two alike. Some students stay at the high school for seven straight periods, while some leave campus for their classes. Each and every one of these 1,536 students are forced to go through the congested Science Hall and fight the mobs of cliques hanging out in the Commons. Each student in the halls of Land O' Lakes High School is driven in a different way to go to school and succeed; each of those students is their own individual. Below, four students' schedules are mapped out; they're all from a different grade level, have different interests, and have different friends. They have never met before, but they cross paths multiple times during their day at LOLHS and they all share the same drive to succeed at whatever it is high school throws at them.

SOCIAL STUDIES

FOLLOW THE MONEY

Mr. Jones spends his days teaching Economic Honors, U.S. Government Honors, and World History Honors. His Economic Honors class spends their time taking lecture notes and afterwards, Mr. Jones rewards knowledgeable students with extra-credit points. The students are required to make outlines for each section in their book and each Friday they have a test. Many of Jones's pupils would recommend to future students that memorization is important in this class. Studying notes before tests and quizzes is imperative to their grade and improvement in the class.

Senior, Alex Harrison states that he was old enough to vote in the 2008 presidential elections and favored McCain.

Kathleen Troutman is a senior in Mr. Jones's class. She likes to see how crazy people get for Mr. Jones's extra credit points. Kathleen also mentioned that she is related to President Buchanan.

Senior Corey Lawton sits in his 7th period working on his assignment. Corey would say that his favorite U.S. President is Richard Nixon, and if he were elected President he would finish the war in Iraq.

Clewon Bass is a senior but sadly did not turn eighteen until after the election. If he could vote he said he'd vote for Barack Obama.

By Taylor Glogowski

Theme: Driven

Using an actual schematic to plot routes and class destinations is an inventive way to both discuss an issue of campus traffic flow and employ additional student coverage. Using silhouettes of the featured students cut out from their individual text boxes makes a stronger visual impact than simply using a mugshot. Photo, said the students had to scramble out of the way of the photo to leave only a minimal impression. This photo shoot is as professional as they come.