

One Week to Better Photography

Lesson 4 – Viewing and Critiquing

The object of this lesson is to review the work students have done and learn from the photographic work of their peers.

This lesson has one related reading and one exercise.

Related Reading

Using Photo Websites

<http://www.walsworthyearbooks.com/idea-file/8660/photo-quest-using-photo-websites/>

Viewing and Critiquing Exercise – In-class critique of the Visual Journaling assignment

Studying the photography of others is another way to learn to take better images. There are many websites that provide images and tips for better photography. Start by looking at your work and the work of other students. You can also learn more about websites on this topic with the related reading.

You should have selected the best five to seven images or descriptions of images collected during the Visual Journaling assignment. Today you will share the images or image descriptions with the rest of the class for a class critique session. If you have images, make sure they are on a jump drive or other means so they can be accessed in class.